About the nature reserve

Designated as a Local Nature Reserve (LNR) in 1993 with the addition of the Abbey Field in 2002, the reserve is owned by Stratford District Council and carefully managed in partnership with Warwickshire Wildlife Trust to ensure the diversity of habitats remain and are enhanced.

The reserve has interesting historical links to Ragley Mill and Alcester Abbey which date back to the middle ages. Evidence of which can be seen on-site today, including the weir which originally diverted water to the mill, via a leat. The mill is now a privately owned dwelling and is not open to the public.

Things to see

The banks of the River Arrow are edged with Willow, Alder, Oak and Hawthorn, which provide ideal perches for Kingfishers. The slopping pebble beach provides the perfect habitat for reeds and other wetland plants, as well as offering an attractive feeding area for many birds and insects such as Grey Wagtails and several regionally scarce beetles.

Look out for the locally rare Small Teasel (Dipsacus pilosus) which occurs in open woodland on damp soils near rivers or streams.

Explore the surrounding area

The Abbey Field is owned and managed by Stratford District Council. It is possible to follow the footpath from River Arrow Nature Reserve, into the Abbey Field and onto the Ancient Monument Site. The mounds and depressions are evidence of the ancient earthworks marking the site of a Benedictine Abbey founded in 1140.

Priors Meadow is owned and managed by Alcester Town Council. The Ancient Monument site extends into the western side of the Priors Meadow, evidenced by further earthworks in this area.

The Ancient Monument site covers an extensive area which the Abbey once covered in its heyday of the 12th and 13th centuries. The meadow has a number of paths and interpretation boards providing further information on the meadows history.
